ncpr APA, DEC still working on fire tower decision

The Adirondack Park Agency says it's still waiting for results of a new study on options for saving fire towers on Hurricane and St. Regis mountains. The APA is working with the state Department of Environmental Conservation, and the state Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Places on ways to save the old fire look-outs. They're popular with hikers, but are considered illegal under current land use designations. Martha Foley has more. (Thanks to WNBZ for help with this story.)
